HAYS ELECTED GOVERNOR OF ARKANSAS

Little Rock, Ark., July 23.—Returns received at headquarters of various political organizations up to 10:30 tonight indicate Judge George W. Hayes' plurality for governor will be 25,000 and that Harry H. Myers, republican, will run second. The democratic State Central committee late tonight claimed 30,000 plurality for Hayes. White County, home of Brundidge, who opposed Hayes in the democratic primary, polled the heaviest vote yet heard from for Col. Murphy, progressive candidate. This county, with Pulaski and Garland, gave Murphy 1,000 lead over Myers. These figures were overcome by Carroll, Searcy, Newton and other northwest counties.

Rain at Muskogee.

Muskogee, Okla., July 24.—A severe electrical storm, which passed over this city and vicinity Wednesday night brought a heavy rain which lasted for thirty minutes, reduced the temperature and greatly aided crops. No damage was done.

al convention. They come from all parts of the United States, from the principal cities of Canada as far west as Vancouver, and some from Great Britain. The sessions are being held in the Metropolitan church and will be brought to a close Sunday with public religious services. Not the least interesting feature of the convention will be the report showing the progress of the movement for supplying the hotels with free Bibles. The report shows that more than 200,000 Bibles have been placed in hotels in the United States since the movement was launched three years ago. The Gideons purpose to continue the work until every guest room of every hotel in America is supplied with a Bible.

FAST WORK ON TARIFF BILL

REPUBLICANS UNABLE TO MUSTER MUCH OPPOSITION TO MEASURE IN SENATE.

Washington, July 23.—Utter demoralization of the Republican Senators on the details of the democratic tariff bill became evident today upon the very first roll call vote on the provisions of the bill. In about ten roll calls held during the afternoon session the republicans were overwhelmingly defeated in each instance. The highest majority for any democratic provision was thirty-nine votes. Similar majorities were rolled up time and again in favor of the House bill, though one time the Progressive Republicans voted with the democrats and another time the reactionary republicans left in disgust, with the result that on purely party votes the democrats could count on never less than ten majority.

The republican fight on the democratic bill appears to have collapsed. From republican sates and from close states the information has been drifting in that the people at large are not exercised over the fact that the country is about to get a democratic tariff bill. "Nobody gives a rap about the tariff fight," is the consensus of reports that are reaching Washington from the middle west and the north generally. With scant encouragement from home to fight the democratic program, the republican senators have become disheartened. The set speeches that have been delivered in opposition to the democratic bill can be counted on the fingers of one hand. Only a few standpat republicans, and one progressive republican, Cummins of Iowa, attacked the democratic schedules. Senator Borah, whose faculty for judging public sentiment is very acute, confined his attack on the bill to a criticism of the income tax.

Today, then, the senate found the opposition oratory exhausted. No one was ready to go ahead and the consideration of the bill section by section was begun.

The chemical schedule was the first installment of the bill considered and seven pages were finished by the time the hour of adjournment was reached. The republicans tried out their strength early in the reading of the bill. Paragraph one deals with Oxalic, pyrogallie and other acids. The Underwood rate of 2c per pound on oxalic acid is cut by the senate bill to 1 1-2c per pound. Senator Smoot, standpat leader, demanded the retention of the house bill duty and asked for a record vote. The result was 50 to 26 in favor of the senate committee provision. Nine republicans and progressives voted with the democrats. These were Borah, Bristow, Crawford, Cummins, Jones, La Follette, Norris, Poindexter and Works.

Next the insurgents attacked the senate provision on pyrogallie acid. The senate rate is 15c per pound, whereas the house rate is 10c per pound. On this occasion the regular republicans, under the leadership of Smoot and Gallinger, voted with the democrats and the senate provision carried by a vote of 55 to 16. The twelve republicans who voted with the democrats were Bradley, Brandegee, Burton, Gallinger, La Follette, Lipitt, McLean, Oliver, Page, Smoot, Sutherland and Townsend.

Thus is given an idea of how the republicans split. So far on every senate committee amendment lowering a house bill rate, the progressives and progressive republicans voted with the democrats, while on every senate amendment raising the house rate the standpatters voted with the democrats. There was an occasional exception to this rule. It was only on several amendments offered by republicans seeking to lower the senate bill rates that a strict party vote was had, and then the republicans fell ten short of a majority. Naturally, the democrats are jubilant over the successful start that has been made and the prospects for an early passage of the bill.

TRIAL PROMISES TO BE SENSATIONAL

At lanta, Ga., July 24.—With the case of Leo M. Frank, the wealthy manufacturer and society man, who is charged with the slaying of pretty 14 year old Mary Phagan, scheduled for trial next Monday, Atlanta is on edge in anticipation of the most sensational trial that has ever taken place in this city. The solution of the mystery that surrounds the death of the child, whose beauty is believed to have led to her sad end, is not all that is involved in the case. It is alleged that stories of police corruption and the employment of methods for "framing up" cases, rivaling the exposures in the Becker case in New York, will play a prominent part in the trial.

Development has come thick and fast since the mutilated body of Mary Phagan was found on Sunday morning, April 27, on a rubbish heap in the basement of the pencil factory building where she was employed. Within a few days after the discovery of the crime Leo M. Frank, the superintendent of the pencil company, together with two negroes, Newt Lee and James Connally, were taken into custody on suspicion of having some knowledge of the case. Lee was the night watchman at the factory and Connally was an employee.

The first big sensation in the case came when Frank was indicted by the Fulton County grand jury on a charge of having murdered the girl. It is understood that the indictment was based principally upon the testimony of

If you Value Your Eyesight See An Expert Optometrist I have spent 30 years preparing myself to perfect the refraction of the eye. My modern equipment, backed by this long experience is your Guarantee of Satisfaction. A. D. COON, Ramsey's Drug Store Ada, Ok the negro Connally. The latter, it is said, made affidavit, that on the day preceding the girl's murder, Frank called him into his office in the pencil factory and asked him to write several notes "to get a sample of his handwriting." Connally stated that he wrote at Frank's dictation and that he believed later the notes he wrote were the same that were found beside the slain girl's body and which evidently were intended to throw suspicion on a negro as the perpetrator of the crime.

At the coroners inquest G. W. Epps, a 15 year old newsboy who was a friend of the murdered girl, testified that she had requested him to call by the pencil factory on several occasions because, she told him, Mr. Frank had sometimes rushed out of the factory ahead of her and winked at her as she went past.

That the best legal talent in Georgia, which is represented in the opposing forces of lawyers, will be on its mettle in the coming trial there is not the slightest question. Neither side has considered expense in the collection of evidence. The prosecution claims to have secured circumstantial evidence so convincing that it regards the accused safely enmeshed. On the other hand the defense lets fall inklings that it can show that a negro is responsible for strangling the child.

Frank acknowledges that he was in the factory when the girl came for her pay, when the plant was closed for a holiday, but that he had no reason to think that the child had not left the building immediately on receiving her envelope.

So far as is known Frank and the two negroes were the only ones in the building during the afternoon and evening of the day on which the crime was committed. The negro watchman, who found the body, declares that he had seen nothing suspicious about the place until he ran into the body on a trash pile in the cellar. The negro Connally, after various tales, declared he was telling the truth when he confessed to having helped Frank dispose of the body.

While there are many things which Frank has not explained satisfactorily his family and many friends are standing squarely by him. He also has a large measure of public sympathy. A majority of the people look upon the crime as typical of the lower negro element and many express the belief that it will be fastened on a member of the black race when all the evidence is brought out.

The political end of the case is extremely interesting, though the effect it will have on the acquittal or conviction of the accused man is altogether problematical. At the bottom of this phase of the case is the political feud between Mayor "Jim" Woodward and the police department. Leaders of the political element seeking to oust the present chief of police and chief of detectives have seized upon the Phagan case as an opportunity to make charges of corrupt methods against the police. The dictagraph has been brought into play and charges of bribery, manufacturing evidence and attempts to shield the slayer or slayers of the Phagan girl have been freely indulged in by those on both sides of the political feud.

Although five propositions are to be voted on at the special election of August 5, very little oratory has been expended on the matter anywhere in the state, nor have the papers been as full of it as heretofore. Is it possible that Oklahomans are growing tired of political agitation?

"The first time the stork visits the home," says the Custer Courier, "the proud father sends out a dozen telegrams and sets up the cigars to all his friends. The second time the bird comes he merely writes a couple of letters and sets 'em up to his close friends. After that he goes up side streets and steers clear of cigar stores and the relatives know nothing of the new arrival until they come for a visit."

Some legislators of Texas are inclined to criticize the attorney general for accepting $500,000 in settlement of the $100,000,000 suit against the Standard Oil Co. Those fellows should remember the old saying about the respective values of the birds in the bush and in hand. Judge Landis once gave judgment against this company for $29,000,000 but it will be remembered that not a cent was ever paid, whereas, the half million lies snugly within the treasury vaults at Austin and will be used to liquidate a part of the state debt.

THE Melting of Molly

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIES

Copyright, 1912, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

SYNOPSIS

The teller of the story, Molly Carter, a young widow, awaiting the return of Al Bennett, an old flame, who is now a distinguished diplomat, tries to reduce weight. Her physician, adviser and next door neighbor is Dr. John, a widower and father of young Billy, whom Molly loves.

Molly is surprised at play with Billy by Judge Wade, who is the most dignified and able man in Hillsboro. Billy comes over from next door with his father.

Hillsboro receives a visit from Ruth Chester, a friend of Bennett, and Molly finds her delightful. Molly goes to the city for an outfit of clothing.

Molly has trouble in reducing her weight. Billy's singing of an old love song about "Molly" under her window brings tears to her eyes.

She flirts with Tom Pollard, her cousin, who is a "ladies' man." She decides to re-enter Hillsboro society by giving a dinner. The doctor catches her eating forbidden jam.

Dr. John and Molly pay a visit to one of his patients, a young mother. She doesn't know whom she really wants to marry, but thinks she will accept Bennett. Tom invites Molly to a dance.

Of all Molly's dances the one with Dr. John pleases her most. Preparations for the dinner are under way. Bennett is almost due in Hillsboro. Billy eats too much and becomes sick.

That settled it. I couldn't let a visiting girl be danced to death. Of course I had planned to make a dignified debut under my own roof, backed up by the presence of ancestral and marital rosewood, silver and mahogany, as a widow should, but duty called me to deuced myself amid the informality of an impromptu dance at the little town hotel. And in the fifteen minutes Tom gave me I deeded to some purpose and flowered out to still more. I never do anything by halves.

In that—that—trousseau old Rene had made me there was one, what she called "simple" lingerie frock. And it looked just as simple as the check it called for, a one and two ciphers back of it. It was of linen as sheer as a cobweb, real lace and tiny, delicious incrustations of embroidery. It fitted in lines that melted into curves, had enticements in the shape of a long sash and a dangerous breast knot of shimmering blue, the color of my eyes, and I looked newborn in it.

I'm glad that poor Mr. Carter was so stern with me about rats and things in my hair, now that they are out of style, for I've got lots of my own left in consequence of not wearing other people's. It clings and coils to my head just any old way that looks as if I had spent an hour on it. That made me able to be ready to go down to Tom in only ten minutes over the time he gave me.

I stopped on next to the bottom step in the wide old hall and called Tom to turn out the light for me, as Judy had gone.

I have turned out that light lots of times, but I felt it best to let Tom see me in a full light when we were alone. It is well I did! At first it stunned him, and it is a compliment to any woman to stun Tom Pollard. But Tom doesn't stay stunned long, and I only succeeded in suppressing him after he had landed two kisses on my shoulder, one on my hair and one on the back of my neck.

"Molly," he said, standing off and looking at me with shining eyes, "you are one lovely dream. Your shoulders are flushed velvet, your cheeks are peaches under cream, your eyes are blue asbath and your mouth a red devil. Come on before I get drunk looking at you." I didn't know whether I liked that or not, and turned down the light quickly myself and went to the gate hurriedly. Tom laughed and behaved himself.

Everybody in town was up to the hotel and everybody was nice to me, girls and all. There is a bunch of lovely posy girls in this town and they were all in full flower. Most of the men were college boys home for vacation, and while they are a few years younger than I, I have been friends with them for always and they know how I dance. I didn't even get near enough to the wall to know it was there, though I was conscious of Aunt Bettie and Mrs. Johnson sitting on it at one end of the room, and every time I passed them I flirted with them until I won a smile from them both. I wish I could be sure of hearing Mrs. Johnson tell Aunt Bettie all about it.

And it was well I did come to save Ruth Chester from a dancing death, for she is as light as a feather and sails on the air like a thistle-down. I felt sorry for Tom, for when he danced with me he could see her, and when he danced with her I pouted at him, even over Judge Wade's arm. I verily believe it was from being really rattled that he asked little Pat Buford to dance with him—by mistake as it were. After that if Pat breathed a single strain of music out of his arms I didn't see it. I knew that some expression on his face and it made me feel so lonesome that I was more craven to the whole than was exactly safe. He dances just as magnificently as he exists in life, and it is a kind of ceremonial to do it with him. The boys all wore white flannels and most of the men, but the judge was as formally dressed as he would have been in midwinter, and I wondered if Alfred could be half as distinguished to look at. I suppose my eyes must have been telling on me about how grand I thought he was looking because he—well, I was rather relieved when one of the boys took me out of his arms for a good, long, swinging two-step.

And how I did enjoy it all, every single minute of it! My heart beat time to the music as if it would never tire of doing so. Miss Chester and I exchanged little laughs and scraps of conversation in between times, and I fell deeper and deeper in love with her. Every pound I have melted and frozen and starved off me has brought me nearer to her, and I just can't think about how I am going to hurt her in a few days now. I put the thought from me and so let myself swing out into thoughtlessness with one of the boys. And after that I really didn't know with whom I was dancing. I began to get so intoxicated with it all.

I never heard musicians play better or get more of the spirit of dance in their music than those did tonight.

"Molly, you are one lovely dream."

They had just given us the most lovely swinging things, one after another, when suddenly they all stopped, and the leader drew his bow across his violin. Never in all my life have I ever heard anything like the call of that waltz from that gypsy's strings. It laughed you a signal, and you felt yourself follow the first strain.

Just then somebody happened to take me from whomever I was with, and I caught step and glided off the universe. The strongest arms that I had felt that evening—or ever—held me, and I didn't have to look up to see who it was. I don't know why I knew, but I did. I wasn't clasped so very close to him or left to float by myself an inch. I was just a part of him like the arms themselves or the hand that mine molded into. And while that wonder music teased and cajoled and mocked and rocked and sobbed and throbbed I laid my cheek against his coat sleeve and gave myself away, I didn't care to whom.

Again that strange sense of some wonderful eternal good came to me, and I found myself humming Billy's little "soul to keep" prayer against the doctor's sleeve to the tune of that magic waltz. I had never danced with him before, of course, but I felt as if I had been doing it always, and I melted in his arms as that baby had melted to his mother out in the cabin a few hours earlier, and I don't see how such happiness as that could stop. But with a soft, entreating wall the music came to an end, and there the doctor was, smiling down into my face with his whimsical, friendly smile that woke me up all over.

"Somebody has stolen a rose from the Carter garden and brought it to the dance," he said with a laugh that was for me alone.

"No," I flashed back, "a string bean." And with that I danced off again with the judge, while the doctor disappeared through the door, and I heard the chug of his car as it whirled away. He had just stopped in for a second to see the fun, and God had given me that gypsy waltz with him because he knew I needed something like that in my life to keep for always.

This has been a happy night, in which I betrothed myself to Alfred, though he doesn't know it yet. I am going to take it as a sign that life for us is going to be brilliant and gay and full of laughter and love.

I haven't had Billy in my arms to-day, and I don't know how I shall ever get myself to sleep if I let myself think about it. His sleep place on my breast aches. It is a comfort to think that the great big God understands the womenfolk that he makes even if they don't understand themselves.

Most parties are just bunches of selfish people who go off in the corners and have good times all by themselves, but in Hillsboro, Tenn., it is not that way. Everybody that is not invited helps the hostess get ready and have nice things for the others, and sometimes I think they really have the best time of all.

This morning Aunt Bettie came up my front steps before breakfast with a large basketful of things for my dinner, and I wondered what I would

High Class Vaudeville 10 & 15 cents

Although it is a trifle dry in this vicinity, F. C. Krieger states that for real sure enough dry weather one must go to western Kansas. The wheat crop was a failure and much of it was never cut. Corn is only a few inches high and the grass hoppers did considerable damage to kafir and other feed crops.

F. C. Krieger and wife returned today from their trip to New Mexico and Arizona. They report a fine time everywhere along the route. At Los Angeles they found Duke Stone and report that he is doing well. In New Mexico the people are making money where they can irrigate, and at Deming, where the water for irrigation purposes comes from wells, the land sells from $300 to $700 per acre. All pumps are run by electric motors, the power for which comes from a central station arranged to supply all. Sunday Mrs. Krieger received a severe shock from a bolt of lightning which struck directly in front of the door before which they were sitting.

LIGHTNING DOES DAMAGE AROUND TULSA

Tulsa, Ok., July 24.—The most severe electrical storm of the season swept through this section of the Mid-continent oil field at 11 o'clock Wednesday night, causing damage estimated from $150,000 to $250,000. The horizon around this city is dotted with oil tank fires, casting a bright illumination all over the sky. Wires are down to the oil fields and it is impossible to ascertain an accurate estimate of the loss.

At Sand Springs, a suburb of Tulsa, one 55,000-barrel oil tank belonging to the Waters-Pierce company is burning in addition to a 35,000 barrel tank of oil belonging to the Phoenix Refining company. The loss of the companies there is said to be $100,000. Over an inch of rain fell in less than thirty minutes.

More Fine Grain Crops Reported.

Henry Young was in from his thresher this morning for a few minutes, and reports a fine run with his machine, although Tuesday when a culvert broke down the separator was overturned in a ditch. However, comparatively little damage was done. Mr. Young reports that the best crop of oats he has threshed was that of Jim Price, who made 91 bushels per acre. Dick Walker leads the wheat growers with 33 1-3 bushels per acre.

On Trial for Killing Policeman.

Fort Worth, Tex., July 24.—The case of Tpm Lee, the negro under indictment for killing Policeman Ogletree last May, was called in court today for trial. The killing of the policeman aroused public feeling to a high pitch and the lynching of the negro was narrowly averted. Lee's trial has been several times postponed on account of his condition, he having been seriously wounded the way the policeman was killed.

This evening in addition to the regular picture program, the Airdome will present Edwin D. Mr. Selvin is one of the platform kings of the day and has the art of entertaining down to a perfect science.

CLEAN TOWN CONTEST

THE STATE HEALTH DEPARTMENT TO HELP

The Clean Town Movement received an impetus today that will be felt in every corner of the town. A letter was received from Dr. Mahr, the state health officer saying he would send at once a dairy inspector under the control of the board of agriculture and from his own department, a sanitary inspector, a food inspector, and a drug inspector. All these to assist and help in this clean up. The committees attack their share of the work with renewed energy and interest feeling now that every thing may be accomplished.

Locally we are to be helped by a police officer whom the commissioners have appointed to devote his time to the clean up movement.

TAYLOR JURY

UNABLE TO AGREE

The jury in the Taylor case is apparently hopelessly deadlocked. The case was given to it about 7:30 Wednesday evening at 4 o'clock this afternoon the only word coming from them was to the effect that there seemed to be no chance for agreement, and requesting that some of the evidence be read to them. This was being done at the hour of going to press.

Clarence Evans Acquitted by Jury.

This morning Clarence Evans was tried in district court on a charge of cutting Henry Galbraith, another negro, with a knife sometime ago. The trial was very brief and resulted in a verdict of not guilty.

County Commissioners Montgomery and Kroth have been in session today putting the finishing touches on the work of preparing tax estimates for the coming year. They also agreed to a compromise with the tax payers who fought the payment of their taxes last year after the state board had raised the valuations 50 per cent, agreeing to settle on the basis fixed by the original assessment.

Vernon Yauntz returned from a visit to Madill yesterday. He reports having a very good time.

MORSE'S CANDY ON ICE

THE UNIVERSITY

Norman, Okla., July 23.—Declaring that drastic methods were necessary to maintain her rights as a free American citizen, Mrs. W. M. Pearl on being locked out of the German room of the state university because of tardiness, went to her room, secured a hatchet, returned and in real "Carrie Nation" fashion smashed the little glass panes from the classroom door. It is a custom of Prof. J. H. Voss to lock his door on tardy students but Mrs. Pearl does not mean to conform to the professor's custom. Much excitement, amounting almost to terror on the part of some, was evidenced by the occupants of the room when the student began her bold attack. After taking proper deliberate steps the faculty suspended Mrs. Pearl from the university. It is rumored that the woman refuses to recognize the action of the faculty, but expects to return to school as usual. Mrs. Pearl has the distinction of being the only woman enrolled in the law school of the University of Oklahoma.

CHARGES LODGED AGAINST WAGONER CO. OFFICIALS

Wagoner, July 24.—Wagoner county commissioners have filed charges against James E. Long, sheriff, alleging that he has "wrongfully, willfully and unlawfully and feloniously" been holding back sums of money due this county, and recommending his suspension from office until a final hearing by a court.

At the same time charges were preferred against C. E. Castle, county attorney, charging him with approaching one John T. Beard, a business man of this city, and soliciting a bribe of $100 in return for which he was to dismiss charges against R. H. Mursell and William Patton, charged with assault and battery. The charges as prepared against the present county attorney also charge him with maladministration, in that during the last six months he has spent approximately $6,000 and procured but one conviction.

Workmen Alleged to Fake Injuries.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 24.—Representatives of the liability insurance companies met in conference here today with the Wisconsin Industrial commission to discuss the workings of the employers' liability and workmen's compensation law. The men who underwrite the industrial hazards believe there is some room for improvement in the statute. Cause for complaint is found in the alleged practice of employees to fake injuries in order to lay off on part pay. While the faking is not practiced to any large extent it is said to have already caused the employers and insurance companies considerable financial loss.

The Perfect Baby Of The Future

A Simple Method That Has a Wonderful Influence upon The Future Infant.

Too much can not be said for a wonderful remedy, familiar to many women as Mother's Friend.

It is more eloquent in its action than all

The health rules ever laid down for the guidance of expectant mothers. It is an external application that spreads its influence upon all the cords, muscles, ligaments and tendons that nature calls into play; they expand gracefully without pain, without strain, and thus leave the mind care-free and in joyful anticipation of the greatest of all womanly ambition.

Mother's Friend must therefore be considered as directly a most important influence upon the character and disposition of the future generation. It is a conceded fact that, with nausea, pain, nervousness and dread banished, there is stored up such an abundance of healthy energy as to bring into being the highest ideals of those who fondly theorize on the rules that insure the coming of the perfect baby.

Mother's Friend can be had at any druggist at $1.00 a bottle, and it is unquestionably one of those remedies that always has a place among the cherished few in the medicine cabinet. Mother's Friend is prepared by the Bradford Regulator Co., 139 Laurel Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., after the formula of a noted family doctor. Write them for a very instructive book to expectant mothers. See that your druggist will supply you with Mother's Friend.

Interest in Ritchie-Rivers Battle.

San Francisco, Cal., July 2.—With the near approach of the date for the fight between Willie Ritchie and Joe Rivers public interest in the battle has increased to a noticeable extent. It will be the only contest on the entire Fourth of July calendar in which a title is involved and will be the first fight in which Ritchie has engaged since he won the championship from Ad Wolgast. The prevailing opinion that Rivers is capable of giving the champion a hard fight for the title and the long end of the purse adds to the interest that is being manifested in the bout. Eddie Graney, who is the promoter of the contest, expects a record-breaking crowd at the ringside. Both of the fighters completed their hard work of training today and will take it easy until the gong calls them into the ring Friday afternoon. Judging from the reports given out at their respective training quarters there is little to choose between the two fighters so far as physical condition is concerned.

The Daughter of David Kerr

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Gloria Kerr, a motherless girl who has spent most of her life at school, arrives at her father's home in Belmont. David Kerr is the political boss of the town and is anxious to prevent his daughter's learning of his real character.

CHAPTER II—Kendall, representing the Chicago packers, is negotiating with Judge Gilbert, Kerr's chief adviser, for a valuable franchise. They fear the opposition of Joe Wright, editor of the reform paper.

CHAPTER III—Kerr asks the assistance of Judge Gilbert in introducing Gloria to Belmont society and promises to help him put through the packers' franchise and let him have all the graft.

CHAPTER IV—Gloria meets Joe Wright at the Gilberts. It appears they are on intimate terms, having met previously in a touring party in Europe.

CHAPTER V—Gloria twists Wright on his failure to keep an engagement to meet her in Paris. He explains that the death of his mother prevented his going to Paris.

CHAPTER VI—The Gilberts invite Gloria to stay with them pending the refurbishing of the Kerr home.

CHAPTER VII—One society bud who refused to meet Gloria is forced to do so when her father is made to feel Kerr's power.

CHAPTER VIII—Wright begins his fight against the proposed franchise in the columns of his paper, the Belmont News.

CHAPTER IX—Kerr, through his henchmen, exerts every influence to hamper Wright in the publication of his paper.

CHAPTER X—Gloria realizes she is not being received by the best society and is unhappy. She takes up settlement work.

CHAPTER XI—Kerr and his lieutenants decide to buy Kerr's paper and ask the editor to meet them at Gilbert's office.

CHAPTER XII—Wright in his desire to keep from Gloria knowledge of her father's position, avoids her during the fight. Gloria is piqued.

CHAPTER XIII—Calling at Gilbert's office to solicit a donation Gloria meets Wright. He proposes and is accepted while waiting to be called into the conference.

CHAPTER XIV—Wright refuses to sell his paper and declares he will fight to a finish.

CHAPTER XV—The Belmont News appears with a bitter attack on Kerr. Gloria calls Wright a coward and refuses to listen to any explanation from him.

CHAPTER XVI—Broken-hearted, Gloria decides to plunge more deeply into settlement work.

CHAPTER XVII—She calls on a sick girl of the underworld named Ella.

CHAPTER XVIII—She learns for the first time that her father is the head of a notorious gang of political grafters.

CHAPTER XIX—Sounds of a conflict are heard in the room over Ella's. Gloria finds Wright unconscious, a victim of an attempted assassination by thugs in the pay of the political ring. She hides him in Ella's room and defies the thugs.

CHAPTER XX—She awes them by announcing that she is Kerr's daughter. Ella threatens to give up Wright to the thugs and is choked into unconsciousness by Gloria, who then falls unconscious on Wright's body.

CHAPTER XXI—They are rescued by Dr. Hayes and his wife. Wright is taken to a hospital and Gloria is taken to the Hayes home. Wright decides to sell his paper and leave Belmont.

"I'm afraid the love one must beg for wouldn't be worth having, Joe. You wouldn't be happy with me. No matter where we went you couldn't forget what happened here. Then consider me—if you'd ever be absent-minded for a minute, gazing into space, I'd know you were thinking of Belmont and the opportunities you'd thrown away because of me. I couldn't stand it. I'd always feel that you were recalling the past and regretting the present. It would kill me. No, Joe, I couldn't."

Wright's proposal had been totally unexpected by Gloria. Up to the time he had begun to plead with her to go away with him, she had maintained fair control of herself. His generous offer, as she termed it, had pierced her armor of reserve and laid bare her warm, quivering heart.

"Pride, Gloria, pride," the man whispered. "It's pride that's keeping you from being true to yourself and true to me."

"Don't speak to me, Joe," she sobbed; "I can't stand it."

In his heart he yearned with all the ardor of youth and love to gather her in his arms and comfort her. Yet he knew her well enough to know that it could not be. Her humiliation had rendered impregnable the barrier she had erected between them. There was naught he could do but suffer in silence while she wept.

CHAPTER XXIII

Gloria hated herself for the paroxysm of emotion to which she had given way in the presence of the man whose love she had rejected. There was no interpretation to be put upon it save that her nerves were overwrought, yet she did not know how he would construe her tears. She did not wish him to think her weak. Suddenly the girl remembered that tears were a woman's weapon. The thought so enraged her that in her anger at being so much a mere woman she forgot to weep. She had in her the spirit of her father. Drying her eyes hastily, she turned to say good-by.

Wright saw her turn and held out her hand. Could she have changed her mind? His heart prompted this thought, but one glance at her face told him she was still determined to go her own way alone.

"Good-by," she said.

"Is it to be good-by, Gloria?"

"That, and nothing more."

The man looked at her in a dazed manner. Now that the time of parting had come she had far more self-possession than he. He groped about in his mind for something to say, but words were inadequate. There is no telling how his feelings might have betrayed him had there not come a knock at the door to interrupt their parting.

At the sound Gloria exclaimed with a start, "Who's that?"

Wright walked to the door, saw who asked for entrance, and opened it wide for Patty to enter.

"Mr. Joe, there's a man says he must see you at once."

"Did you tell him I was busy, and to wait?"

"Oh, yes, just like you told me, but he said to tell you he was David Kerr!"

"My father!" Gloria took a step forward. Her exclamation told what a surprise this news was to her.

"What does this mean?" he asked.

"You know as much as I. I've told you I've not seen my father since that day in Judge Gilbert's office. He's been busy with politics, but, more than that, I've—well, I've preferred staying with Mrs. Hayes."

Patty, tired of listening to a conversation she could not understand, and, remembering the visitor, asked: "What shall I tell him?"

"Wait a minute, Patty," Wright motioned the child to the door. Then he turned to Gloria. "You can leave by this side entrance. No one will be the wiser for this visit. The minute the door closes behind you, Patty—and I will have forgotten that you called. But I will not have forgotten your kindness and consideration. Before you leave I want you to know that I can't value too highly the motive that prompted your call. To the end I'll treasure it as a memory hallowed by the parting from the only woman I—Good-by."

He felt he could not complete what he wished to say without a show of emotion to which it would not do to give way. The only thing he could do was to hold out his hand and say, "Good-by."

Gloria put both her hands behind her back, and shook her head. "No, I refuse to go."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean just what I say. I intend to stay here and meet my father and hear what he has to say to you."

Wright gazed at her intently, but she did not quiver under his scrutiny. "It shall be as you say," he assented. "Go, Patty, tell him to come in." After Patty closed the door there was an awkward silence which he broke by saying, "I must say that this meeting is ill-advised."

She sighed and shook her head.

"Oh, ill-advised or not, my mind is made up. Things cannot go on as they are. If henceforth I am to direct my own affairs, why shouldn't I begin now?"

"But how explain your being here?"

"If he can't believe what I have to say he isn't worth the slight esteem with which I still regard him."

"Here he comes."

"Let him see you first." She retreated to a corner of the room where her father's first glance as he entered would not discover her. Patty opened the door and David Kerr walked into the room.

The two men looked at each other without any attempt at a feigned cordiality.

"Mr. Wright," began the boss, and at mention of his name the newspaper man bowed slightly in recognition of the greeting. "I met Dr. Hayes this afternoon. He spoke of you, and what he told me has led me to break a custom of years; I've come to see you. In this town it's always been the other way." He spoke with all his accustomed force, and seemed even more confident than usual as he added, "The old way will continue, sir, but owing to what you might call the relationship that once—"

"Sir!" thundered Wright in astonishment. Covertly he looked at Gloria, to find his own amazement mirrored on her face.

"Bound up, I thought I'd come to see you," the boss continued, not heeding Wright's exclamation.

"One minute, sir," Wright was not willings for him to proceed without his knowing that his daughter was in the room with them. "Before you speak further you must know that we're not alone in this room."

"We're not?" He looked about him, and at the sound of a familiar voice turned sharply to confront his daughter.

"No, father; I'm here." She advanced coolly to the center of the room, and waited for him to speak.

"Gloria! My daughter here!" He managed to gasp. Wright, determined not to have his hand forced, waited to see what card the daughter would play.

"Wait a minute, please," she remarked quietly, the most self-possessed of the three. "Are you so blind you can't see you find me here because I wish it so? My visit to Mr. Wright surprised him just as much as did yours. When you were announced, I told him I would stay."

"So that's it, is it?" her father raged. "Have you turned against me, too? Why didn't I raise you like you ought to 'a' been!" It was with an evident effort that he was restraining himself even as much as he was.

"Would to heaven you had!" Gloria exclaimed in a low tone. "You gave me only the roses of life, and now the thorns—all that life offers me—seem sharper than I can bear."

Wright had thought his heart had been so wrung that nothing could hurt him worse, but this confession of unhappiness to her father made his own unhappiness greater than he had believed it could be.

"Gloria, this is distressingly painful. Please don't," he begged. Then he turned to her father. "Why have you come here?"

"Why is she here?"

"Father," now she spoke timidly, a maiden telling of a dear, dead love,

"for a little while Mr. Wright and I—were engaged to be married. I don't think you know what that means to a girl, what it meant to me. But you do know how it ended. Yet we're still such good friends that I felt I could come this afternoon to—"

As she spoke, a great light began to dawn upon her father. At the words "good friends" he saw his whole plan successful, although worked out along lines a trifle different than what had been in his mind when he had determined to call upon the editor. Your successful general is a great opportunist, and David Kerr was quick to seize this opportunity.

"Good friends!" he echoed, interrupting her. "Then I'm glad I found you here. Just listen to me a minute. I ain't got much to say, Mr. Wright, but we understand each other pretty well. Now then—you gave us a pretty hard bump, an' I admire you for it. Of course, you're new to Belmont an' it looks all right from yer p'int o' view." His tone was now suave and conciliatory. "But you're too good a man to be blockin' the wheels o' progress in this town."

"Things were running pretty smooth when I came here, weren't they?" Wright was willing to admit that much.

"Exactly, exactly," Kerr took a step forward and glanced at Gloria before he went on. "Now then, what do you say to this? You switch over an' join me. If it's too strong for you to go, I'll cut out that Maple avenue railway line, an' we'll go at it some other way."

To Be Continued.

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFULLY DARKENS THE HAIR WHEN FADED AND GRAY

Mixed With Sulphur It Makes Hair Soft, Beautiful; Cures Dandruff

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But the brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so just insist upon getting Wyeth's, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says the customers insist on Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant. and but little sign of activity. A large wagon passed through Main street carrying a placard on either side. On each was printed the following notice:

♦ BRIGHTEN UP MAYBRIDGE ♦
♦ Have your rubbish in boxes or ♦ ♦ barrels near the street. This ♦ ♦ wagon will haul it away without ♦ ♦ charge. ♦
♦ ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦

Two hours later, when the wagon returned on Main street it was full to overflowing. The little crowd in front of the postoffice watched it go by.

"Looks as though some of the folks were getting into the campaign," said Joshua Newton.

"There's always plenty of people to take advantage of gettin' things done free," sneered Lawyer Dunkle.

"You don't think much will come of the campaign then?" asked young Joe Wilcox.

"No," came the vigorous answer. "Nuthin' will come of it."

"And what's more," put in Josiah Stubbs, "young Hollister will be so ashamed that you won't see him again."

There was a brief silence.

"What's that?" spoke up, Joe Wilcox suddenly.

The others looked in the direction he was pointing. There, three blocks away, was a man rapidly climbing up the steeple of Calvary church.

"Who is it?" asked James Dunkle.

"It's George Hollister," answered one of the younger members of the group.

"What's he up there for?" asked Josiah Stubbs.

"We'll know in a minute," said Ezra Galpin.

The little group saw the young man reach the top of the steeple and pause at the base of the faded wooden cross. Then they saw him produce a pail which he hung on his belt. A few moments later he stood erect and moved his arm rapidly up and down. And then in the sunlight came the sparkle of gold from the upper section of the cross.

The editor also formulated the following Brighten Up Creed, which he printed in a conspicuous position in the newspaper:

♦ ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦
♦ THE BRIGHTEN UP CLUB ♦
♦ CREED. ♦

♦ To Brighten Up myself—to be ♦ ♦ optimistic, cheerful and good ♦ ♦ natured. ♦

♦ To Brighten Up my home and ♦ ♦ spread the Brighten Up spirit ♦
♦ among my neighbors. ♦

♦ To Brighten Up my business and ♦ ♦ take pleasure as well as profit ♦
♦ from it. ♦

♦ To Brighten Up my town and ♦ ♦ promote its social, industrial ♦ ♦ and commercial progress. ♦

♦ To promote the love of Nature, ♦
♦ sunshine and fresh air. ♦

♦ To adopt Brighten Up as my ♦ ♦ slogan. ♦
♦ ♦ ♦ ♦ ♦

The Rubbish wagon was unable to cope with the demands, and a second wagon was pressed into service.

The sidewalks and streets were cleaned; pickets were adjusted on fences, and gates made to swing instead of lean. Vacant lots were cleared of debris; lawns were trimmed, flowers set out and seeds planted. Buildings, fences, sheds and walls, were painted, and, from the constantly increasing general fund, men were employed to improve the section near the station and to further carry on "the crusade against rubbish and for beauty."

The school children were active agents throughout the campaign, and when the conservative element was overcome and the movement became a popular one, practically all Maybridge joined in the crusade.

George Hollister counts the last night of his vacation a memorable one. He was once more the guest of the Men's Club of Calvary Church.

He smiled when the chairman in introducing him said, "This young man talked to us just a month ago tonight. He put up a scheme that some of us old fogeys called a fool idea, and when he said he wanted to do something for the town and offered his services, we sneered and turned him down. But he's done more for Maybridge than any other citizen, livin' or dead. You all know how he brightened it up and how paint will do! You all know how grass and flowers have taken the place of rubbish, and how business in general has improved. You all know how the spirit of the town has been sort of changed, how we're proud to live here, and how we've begun to plan bigger for the future. But there are some things you don't know. The editor of The Chronicle told me this morning that eight other towns in the state have heard about our brightenin' up and have written for the rules for brightenin' themselves up. Gentlemen, that's good advertisin', and it pays to advertise a town just as it pays to advertise a business."

"Here's another thing you don't know. This afternoon the representatives of a big manufacturin' plant, employing fourteen hundred men, came here to look us over. Maybridge is one of five towns they're considering for their new plant. The shippin' facilities and the location may have had a good deal to do with it, but I want to tell you that it was the signs of progress and prosperity in the business and residence districts that impressed them most. The papers ain't signed yet, but the president whispered to me that here's where they're comin'. There are more things you don't know, some we'll find out about about from time to time that are due to our recent crusade, but there's only one more that I'm goin' to mention. Amos Parsons, the best known man that ever lived in Maybridge, came home yesterday to spend a few days with his old mother. I had the pleasure of ridin' round with him, and he told me that this is the neatest, cleanest and best little town that he knows. And he said he would like to add $50,000 to the Spencer School endowment."

There was vigorous applause after this announcement.

There was even more applause when George Hollister was introduced, and still more when he concluded expressing his appreciation of the united spirit it that made the Brighten Up Campaign possible.

It was a proud family that saw George off the next day. There was a twinkle in his father's eye, as he said to him, "Incidental to the general good, my boy, you certainly have helped your father's business. I've sold more paint and nails and tools durin' the campaign week than in any six months since I've been in business."

When the train pulled out, the young man stood on the back platform to wave his good-byes, and then he took a sweeping glance about and noted the many evidences of his Brighten Up Campaign.

He smiled.

"The old home ain't what it used to be!"
